Intra and Periarticular Infiltration

This is a procedure in which drug is injected in or around the joint. It is useful to reduce inflammation in case of arthritis.

Facet Joint Infiltration

Facet joints are small joints at each segment of the spine which provide stability and help guide motion. The facet joints can become painful due to arthritis of the spine, a back injury or mechanical stress to the back. A lumbar (lower back) facet joint injection involves injecting a medication, which can treat the inflammation and block the pain.
